

Reasons for Support: Nick owns a small marketing company in Fort Collins. He is active in the community and is one of the organizers of Fort Collins Start Up Week. In addition, he is president of his homeowner's association. Nick's positions on key issues align well with those of FCBR. He is creative and understands the need to bring a diverse group of residents to the table to solve important community problems such as housing affordability. He may not have a lot of experience in public policy, but he has devoted himself to learning about the issues and has sought out experts to educate himself. FCBR believes he can bring energy and a new perspective to the City Council.
